Attorneys for Defendant Abilene Motor Express, Inc.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

Defendant Abilene Motor Express, Inc. (“Abilene”) is a motor carrier headquartered in Richmond, Virginia, that transports freight of all kinds, including machinery, building materials, paper products, and refrigerated food. Plaintiff Larry Gravestock (“Plaintiff”) is a former driver for Abilene. Plaintiff filed this putative class action against Abilene asserting various wage-and-hour violations under California law, including, inter alia, Abilene’s alleged failure to provide meal and rest periods and derivative claims based on that allegation.

Abilene moves to dismiss Plaintiff’s claims that arise from the alleged meal and rest break violations on the ground that these claims are preempted by the Federal Aviation Administration Authorization Act (“FAAAA”). The FAAAA preempts state laws “having a connection with, or reference to [motor] carrier rates, routes and services.” See 49 U.S.C. § 14501(c)(1); Rowe v. N.H. Motor Transp. Ass’n, 552 U.S. 364, 370 (2008). California’s break laws are preempted as to motor carriers such as Abilene under the FAAAA as they directly regulate and have a “substantial effect” on the motor carriers’ routes, services, and prices. Id. California’s break laws “a) affect routes by limiting carriers to a smaller set of possible routes to allow for stopping and breaking; b) affect services by ‘dictating when services may not be performed, by increasing the time it takes to complete a delivery, and by effectively regulating the frequency and scheduling of transportation,’ albeit not to an absolute degree; and c) affect price by virtue of their impact on routes and services.” Aguirre v. Genesis Logistics, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 186132, *20-21 (C.D. Cal. 2012).

Federal district courts have thus found, almost universally, that California’s rest break laws are preempted as a matter of law. See, e.g., Dilts v. Penske Logistics LLC, 819 F. Supp. 2d 1109 (S.D. Cal. 2011) (appeal pending) (granting summary judgment as to drivers’ break claims because they were preempted under the

1 FAAAA); Esquivel v. Vistar Corp., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26686 (C.D. Cal. 2012) 2 (granting motion to dismiss drivers' break claims because they were preempted 3 under the FAAAA); Aguilar v. Cal. Sierra Express, Inc., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4 63348 (E.D. Cal. 2012) (granting motion to dismiss drivers' break claims because 5 they were preempted under the FAAAA); Campbell v. Vitran Express, Inc., 2012 6 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 85509 (C.D. Cal. 2012) (appeal pending) (granting motion for 7 judgment on the pleadings that drivers' break claims are preempted under the 8 FAAAA "as a matter of law"); Cole v. CRST, Inc., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 144944
 9 (C.D. Cal. 2012) (same); Aguirre v. Genesis Logistics, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10 186132 (C.D. Cal. 2012) (same).

11 Because the FAAAA preempts California's break laws as a matter of law, 12 Abilene respectfully requests that this Court dismiss Plaintiff's third and fourth 13 causes of action with prejudice.

14 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

15 A. Abilene is a Motor Carrier.

16 Abilene is a Virginia-based motor carrier that has its principal place of 17 business in Virginia. Abilene is licensed to ship various types of freight within and 18 across state lines. See Request for Judicial Notice ("RJN"), Exh. 2 and Exh. 3.
 19 Plaintiff, and the putative class of current and former employees that he purports to 20 represent, worked or works at Abilene as drivers. See RJN, Exh. 1, Compl. ¶ 14.

21 As a motor carrier, Abilene must comply with the applicable regulations set 22 forth by the federal Department of Transportation ("DOT") and the Interstate 23 Commerce Commission, and holds licenses and permits from both agencies. See 24 RJN, Exh. 2 and Exh. 3. Abilene is also required to operate pursuant to the Hours of 25 Service ("HOS") regulations promulgated by the DOT, which regulate the hours and 26 conditions for drivers covered by the Motor Carrier Act. See 49 C.F.R. Part 395.

28 ///

B. Plaintiff's Third and Fourth Causes of Action Allege Violations of California State Meal and Rest Break Requirements.

At issue in Plaintiff's third and fourth causes of action are the requirements of California law that specifically designate when and how rest breaks and meal periods must be taken.¹ See Brinker v. Superior Court, 53 Cal. 4th 1004, 1040-41, 1049 (2012). Labor Code section 226.7 provides that "[n]o employer shall require any employee to work during any meal or rest period mandated by an applicable order of the Industrial Welfare Commission." Wage Order 9-2001(11)(A), which applies to the transportation industry, provides as follows:

No employer shall employ any person for a work period of more than five (5) hours without a meal period of not less than 30 minutes, except that when a work period of not more than six (6) hours will complete the day's work the meal period may be waived by mutual consent of the employer and the employee.

8 Cal. Code Regs. § 11090(11)(A). Wage Order 9-2001(11)(B) further provides:

An employer may not employ an employee for a work period of more than ten (10) hours per day without providing the employee with a second meal period of not less than 30 minutes, except that if the total hours worked is no more than 12 hours, the second meal period may be waived by mutual consent of the employer and the employee only if the first meal period was not waived.

¹ On December 27, 2011, the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration ("FMCSA") published changes to its HOS Regulations, but postponed carrier compliance with many of the changes until July 1, 2013. Hours of Service of Drivers, 76 Fed. Reg. 81134 (Dec. 27, 2011). The newly-amended HOS Regulations add a federal requirement, stating that covered drivers must receive a single 30-minute off-duty break that the driver may take at any time, so long as he does not drive after eight consecutive hours on duty without a break. 49 C.F.R. § 395.3(a)(3)(ii) (effective July 1, 2013). Under the new regulations, that break can be taken at the time of the driver's choosing, and thus, "[d]rivers will have great flexibility in deciding when to take a break." 76 Fed. Reg. at 81134; 81136. Thus, to the extent that covered motor carriers, such as Abilene, are obligated to comply with the DOT's HOS Regulations, California's more restrictive requirements would be preempted as they are in direct conflict with the federal requirements. See Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d at 1116 ("Federal law may preempt state law under the supremacy clause either by express provision, by implication, or by a conflict between federal and state law.).

1 8 Cal. Code Regs. § 11090(11)(B); Lab. Code § 512. In addition to meal periods, 2 Wage Order 9-2001 provides that an employer must authorize 10-minute rest breaks 3 for each four hours (or a major fraction thereof) worked. See 8 Cal. Code Regs.
 4 § 11090(12)(A).

5 California's meal and rest break laws thus require that motor carrier services 6 cease at certain times of the day and for certain periods of time, in order for drivers 7 to complete the mandated meal and rest breaks. See Cal. Lab. Code § 512; 8 Cal.
 8 Code Regs. § 11090(12)(A). In a 10-hour period, this would amount to two 30-9 minute meal breaks and three 10-minute rest breaks—a total of 1 ½ hours, or about 10 15 percent of the work day during which the drivers are not permitted to provide 11 services and must exit their routes. See id. Moreover, Abilene's trucks cannot 12 simply pull over wherever they happen to be, but are required to drive to certain 13 areas, possibly off their direct route, that can legally accommodate such trucks, and 14 the drivers must locate those places for each of the potential five meal and/or rest 15 breaks, thus adding additional down time to the 1 ½ hours of breaks.² These 16 restrictions conflict with the HOS regulations that are uniformly applied and 17 necessarily require motor carriers to modify their delivery schedules and routes 18 when servicing customers in California. In turn, interference with a motor carrier's 19 routes and services also impacts their pricing.

20 C. Removal to Federal Court.

21 On February 5, 2014, Abilene removed the action to federal court on the basis

23 ² California prohibits certain trucks from idling for more than 5 minutes at a time. Cal. Code 24 Regs. Tit. 13, § 24851; see e.g., Cal. Veh. Code § 21718(a) (prohibiting stopping on the freeway 25 except under limited circumstances, such as when a vehicle becomes disabled); Cal. Veh. Code § 26 22500; § 22502 (restricting locations that vehicles may be parked); Cal. Veh. Code § 22505 27 (authorizing state authorities to prohibit the stopping or parking of vehicles exceeding six feet in 28 height in areas that would be "dangerous to those using the highway"); see also 49 C.F.R. § 392.14 (imposing a duty on commercial motor vehicle operators to use "extreme caution" when hazardous weather conditions exist); 49 C.F.R. § 397.7; § 397.69 (restricting the parking of and authorizing local restrictions on the routing of vehicles carrying hazardous materials).

1 of diversity jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a). [Docket No. 1].

2 III. LEGAL STANDARD

3 A Rule 12(b)(6) motion under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure tests the 4 legal sufficiency of the claims asserted in a complaint. The court must decide 5 whether the facts alleged, if true, would entitle the plaintiff to some form of legal 6 remedy. De La Cruz v. Tormey, 582 F. 2d 45, 48 (9th Cir. 1978). For purposes of 7 such a motion, the court assumes as true all well-pleaded facts in a complaint and 8 attached exhibits and views them in a light most favorable to the plaintiff. Zinerman
9 v. Burch, 494 U.S. 113, 118 (1990). The court need not, however, accept as true 10 legal characterizations, conclusory allegations, unreasonable inferences, or 11 unwarranted deductions of fact. Transphase Sys., Inc. v. S. Cal. Edison Co., 839 F.
12 Supp. 711, 718. (C.D. Cal. 1993); Beliveau v. Caras, 873 F. Supp. 1393, 1395-96
13 (C.D. Cal. 1995).

14 Dismissal is proper where “it appears beyond doubt that plaintiff can prove no 15 set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief.” Moore v. City 16 of Costa Mesa, 886 F.2d 260, 262 (9th Cir. 1989). Similarly, dismissal is proper 17 where an affirmative defense or other bar to relief is apparent from the face of the 18 complaint. Groten v. California, 251 F.3d 844, 851 (9th Cir 2001). Further, where 19 a complaint alleges several distinct claims for relief, it is common practice to apply 20 Rule 12(b)(6) to individual causes of action. Moran v. Peralta Comty. Coll. Dist., 21 825 F. Supp. 891, 894-95 (N.D. Cal. 1993); Strigliabotti v. Franklin Resources, Inc., 22 398 F. Supp. 2d. 1094, 1097 (N.D. Cal. 2005). The sole issue raised by a Rule 23 12(b)(6) motion is whether the facts pleaded, if established, would support a valid 24 claim for relief. Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 682-83 (1946).

25 Under the legal standard for a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, Plaintiff has not and 26 cannot allege facts sufficient to support a claim for a violation of California’s meal 27 and rest break laws.

4839-8201-5512.1

IV. PLAINTIFF'S MEAL AND REST BREAK CLAIMS ARE PREEMPTED BY THE FAAAA AND SHOULD BE DISMISSED AS A MATTER OF LAW

A. The Preemptive Effect of the FAAAA on Meal and Rest Break Laws Should be Decided a Matter of Law.

In 1994, Congress enacted the FAAAA to eliminate the “patchwork” of state regulation of motor carriers “which caused significant inefficiencies, increased costs, reduction of competition, inhibition of innovation and technology, and curtail[ed] the expansion of markets.” See Californians for Safe and Competitive Dump Truck Transp. v. Mendonca, 152 F.3d 1184, 1187 (9th Cir. 1998) (quoting H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 103-677, at 86-88 (1994)). See also Dan's City Used Cars v. Pelkey, 133 S. Ct. 1769, 1780 (2013) (adopting the “patchwork” analysis in determining that New Hampshire’s law regarding the storage of towed vehicles was not preempted). The FAAAA provides that the States “may not enact or enforce a law, regulation, or other provision . . . related to a price, route or service of any motor carrier . . . with respect to the transportation of property.” 49 U.S.C. § 14501(c) (1).

For the FAAAA to be effective in achieving its purpose of unifying regulation of motor carriers across the country, preemption determinations must not be made on a carrier-by-carrier basis, but must instead be made industry-wide with respect to a particular challenged law. Because this determination rests on the potential impact of the challenged law, rather than its actual impact on any particular motor carrier, it is appropriate for determination as a matter of law by demurrer. “Evidence outside the pleadings . . . is not necessary to determine whether the Meal and Rest Break Laws have an impact on prices, routes, or services,” Cole, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 144944 at *12-17 ; see, e.g., Esquivel, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26686 at *14-15 (granting motion to dismiss drivers’ break claims because they are preempted under the FAAAA); Aguilar, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63348 at *2-3 (granting motion to dismiss drivers’ break claims because preempted under the FAAAA); Campbell,

1 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 85509 at *9-10 (granting motion for judgment on the 2 pleadings that drivers' break claims are preempted under the FAAAA "as a matter 3 of law"); Cole, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 144944 at *12-17 (same); Aguirre, 2012 U.S.
 4 Dist. LEXIS 186132 at *12-21 (same).

5 It is the "imposition of substantive standards upon a motor carrier's routes 6 and services . . . that implicates preemption here," not the exact nature of the motor 7 carrier's delivery structure. See Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d at 1119-20. Thus, because 8 the preemption issue is a legal one, this Court can and should dismiss Plaintiff's 9 meal and rest break claims as a matter of law.

10 B. Rowe Dictates that State Laws Having a Significant Impact on 11 Prices, Routes, or Services are Preempted by the FAAAA.

12 Federal pre-emption occurs when either "(1) a Congressional statute explicitly 13 pre-empts state law, (2) state law actually conflicts with federal law, or (3) federal 14 law occupies a legislative field to such an extent that one can reasonably conclude 15 that Congress left no room for state regulation in that field." Campbell, 2012 U.S.
 16 Dist. LEXIS 85509 at *2. According to the Supreme Court, the following four 17 principles govern the preemptive reach of the FAAAA:

18 (1) that "[s]tate enforcement actions having a connection 19 with, or reference to," carrier prices, routes, or services are 20 preempted; (2) that such preemption may occur even if a 21 state law's effect on prices, routes, or services "is only 22 indirect"; (3) that with respect to preemption, it does not 23 matter whether a state law is consistent or inconsistent 24 with federal regulation; and (4) that preemption occurs "at 25 least where state laws have a 'significant impact' related to 26 Congress' deregulatory and pre-emption related 27 objectives."

28 Rowe, 552 U.S. at 370-71 (emphasis in original; internal quotation marks removed).

At issue in Rowe was a law passed by the State of Maine aimed at preventing tobacco sales to minors, which forbade licensed tobacco retailers from employing a

1 “delivery service,” unless it complied with particular delivery procedures. Id. at 2 372. The Court found that Maine’s law would produce the very effect that the 3 FAAAA sought to avoid—namely, the substitution of its own governmental 4 commands for “competitive market forces” in determining the services that motor 5 carriers will provide. Id.

6 Maine argued to the Supreme Court that its tobacco regulation would “impose 7 no significant costs upon carriers” and that, therefore, the effect of its regulation on 8 prices, routes, and services was not “significant” for purposes of FAAAA
 9 preemption analysis. Rowe, 552 U.S. at 373. The Supreme Court found Maine’s 10 argument to be “off the mark” because the forbidden “significant impact” is not 11 limited to those state laws that would impose a significant cost. Id. Rather, a state’s 12 law has a “significant impact” on prices, routes, or services if its “‘effect’ is 13 ‘forbidden’ under federal law.” Id. at 375 (citing Morales v. TransWorld Airlines, 14 504 U.S. 374, 390 (1992) (emphasis added)). As such, the Supreme Court did not 15 base its decision on whether a particular carrier could comply with the Maine 16 statute. Instead, because Maine’s law forced carriers to provide a service that they 17 “do not (or in the future might not) wish to provide,” which is contrary to the 18 purpose of the FAAAA, the effect of Maine’s law was “significant” and, for that 19 reason, preempted. Id. at 373. The Court concluded:

20 To allow Maine to insist that the carriers provide a special 21 checking system [for tobacco products] would allow other 22 States to do the same. And to interpret the federal law to 23 permit these, and similar, state requirements could easily
 24 lead to a patchwork of state service-determining laws, 25 rules, and regulations. That state regulatory patchwork is inconsistent with Congress’ major legislative effort to leave such decisions, where federal unregulated, to the competitive marketplace.

26 Id. (emphasis added). The Supreme Court thus held that, even if the statute did not 27 directly regulate carriers, and even if the costs the statute imposed on the 28 transportation industry (or on any particular carrier) were insignificant, the statute

1 was still preempted. Id. at 376; Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d at 1119-20 (noting that this 2 is not an “increased cost of business” issue and that no factual analysis is required to 3 answer the preemption question); see also American Trucking Ass’n, Inc. v. City of 4 Los Angeles (“ATA IIP”), 133 S. Ct. 2096, 2103 (2013) (observing that the public 5 entity’s “intentions are not what matters” in holding that placard and parking plan 6 requirements imposed on drayage truckers by the Port of Los Angeles are preempted 7 by the FAAAA).

8 The Supreme Court has acknowledged that “federal law might not pre-empt 9 state laws that affect fares in only a ‘tenuous, remote, or peripheral . . . manner,’ 10 such as state laws forbidding gambling.” Rowe, 552 U.S. at 371 (emphasis added).
 11 Likewise, a “state regulation that broadly prohibits certain forms of conduct and 12 affects, say, truck drivers, only in their capacity as members of the public (e.g., a 13 prohibition on smoking in certain public places),” might not be preempted. Rowe, 14 552 U.S. at 375. However, the California meal and rest break requirements at issue 15 here are not tenuous, remote, or peripheral, nor are they based on prohibitions 16 related to the drivers only as members of the public. Thus, these California 17 requirements are preempted.

18 Moreover, the Ninth Circuit has recognized that federal preemption under the 19 FAAAA may occur even when the effect on rates, routes, and services is indirect.
 20 American Trucking Ass’n v. City of Los Angeles (“ATA IIP”), 660 F.3d 384, 396 (9th 21 Cir. 2011) (overruled on other grounds). In reversing ATA II, however, the U.S.
 22 Supreme Court concluded that the following two requirements imposed by the Port 23 of Los Angeles were within the scope of the FAAAA and preempted by it: (1) that 24 drayage truckers display a placard with a phone number to report unsafe or 25 environmental concerns (“You’ve seen the type: ‘How am I driving? 213-867-26 5309’”) and (2) that drayage truckers submit a plan listing off-site off-duty parking 27 locations for each truck. See ATA III, 133 S. Ct. at 2100. Because of the FAAAA’s 28 broad preemptive scope, in “borderline” cases, where the effect of the regulation

1 may be close to merely “tenuous” or “remote,” the Ninth Circuit has held that “the 2 proper inquiry is whether the provision, directly or indirectly, “binds the . . . carrier 3 to a particular price, route or service and thereby interferes with competitive market 4 forces within the . . . industry.” ATA II, 660 F.3d at 397 (citing Air Transport Ass’n 5 of Am. v. City and County of San Francisco, 266 F.3d 1064, 1071 (9th Cir. 2001)).
 6 Here, California’s meal and rest break requirements do indeed bind carriers, such as 7 Abilene, to prices, routes, or services which interfere with competitive market 8 forces. See Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d 1118-19 (“While [California’s meal and rest 9 break laws] do not strictly bind Penske’s drivers to one particular route, they have 10 the same effect by depriving them of the ability to take any route that does not offer 11 adequate locations for stopping, or by forcing them to take shorter or fewer routes.
 12 In essence, the laws bind motor carriers to a smaller set of possible routes.”).

13 C. California’s Break Laws “Relate to” Motor Carrier Services, 14 Routes, and Prices.

15 “State enforcement actions having a connection with, or reference to [motor] 16 carrier rates, routes and services are pre-empted.” Rowe, 552 U.S. at 370-71.
 17 California’s restrictive break laws clearly “relate to” motor carrier service, routes, or 18 prices. The “services” of a motor carrier “refers to ‘the frequency and scheduling of 19 transportation, and to the selection of markets to or from which transportation is 20 provided.’” Campbell, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 85509 at * 7 (quoting ATA II, 660 21 F.3d at 397). “Rates” of a motor carrier “refers to the prices it charges for services,” 22 and “routes” refer to the “courses of travel used by the motor carrier.” Id.

23 California break laws require an off-duty 30-minute meal break “no later than 24 the start of an employee’s fifth hour of work,” a second off-duty 30-minute meal 25 break “after no more than 10 hours of work,” and a 10-minute rest break every four 26 hours throughout the workday (or major fraction thereof). Brinker, 53 Cal. 4th at 27

1 1041.³ These break requirements amount to an effective reduction in a driver's 2 service time by 15 percent each day, not including the special routing and additional 3 time it takes him or her to find appropriate locations to park the truck during each 4 break interval.

5 In Dilts, a district court applied the Rowe analysis to a class action brought by 6 Penske drivers who were transporting and installing Whirlpool appliances purely 7 intrastate. Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d at 1109. There, the court held that the FAAAA 8 preempted California's meal and rest break laws, even as to drivers involved in only 9 the intrastate transportation of goods, and the district court's analysis appropriately 10 focused on the likely effect of the law on the motor carrier industry more generally.
 11 Id.

12 With respect to "routes," the district court found that California's "fairly rigid 13 meal and break requirements impact the types and lengths of routes that are 14 feasible" insofar as drivers would be required to make at least five stops, at specified 15 times, during a 12-hour workday. Id. at 1118. The court also concluded that the 16 laws "necessarily forced drivers to alter their routes daily while searching out an 17 appropriate place to exit the highway, [and] locating stopping places that safely and 18 lawfully accommodate their vehicles." Id.

19 While the laws do not strictly bind Penske's drivers to one 20 particular route, they have the same effect by depriving 21 them of the ability to take any route that does not offer 22 adequate locations for stopping, or by forcing them to take 23 shorter or fewer routes. In essence, the laws bind motor 24 carriers to a smaller set of possible routes.

25 Id. at 1118-19. Accordingly, the district court found that California's break laws 26 had the prohibitive "significant effect" on routes. Id. This analysis would apply 27 identically to Abilene's drivers, who would face an analogous constraint on their 28 ³ These rigid meal and break requirements are far more restrictive than the HOS Regulations published by the FMCSA.

1 possible routes by virtue of the timing and imposition of California's meal and rest 2 break requirements.

3 The Dilts district court likewise found that California's break laws had a 4 significant effect on services. Id. Specifically, because the break laws require an 5 off-duty 10-minute rest break every four hours or a major fraction thereof 6 (preferably in the middle of the four-hour break) and an off-duty 30-minute meal 7 break every five hours, "by virtue of simple mathematics," the laws "reduce the 8 amount of on-duty work time allowable to drivers and thus reduce the amount and 9 level of service Penske can offer its customers without increasing its workforce and 10 investment in equipment." Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d at 1119; see also Campbell, 2012 11 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 85509 at *9 ("When employees must stop and take breaks, it takes 12 longer to drive the same distance . . ."). Using the Ninth Circuit's definition of 13 "services," the district court found that "the length and timing of meal and rest 14 breaks seems directly and significantly related to such things as the frequency and 15 scheduling of transportation." Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d at 1119 (emphasis added).

16 The Dilts district court discussed that these ramifications on Penske's routes 17 and services contributed to a significant impact on price. Specifically, the Dilts 18 district court held that the California regulations were not an "increased cost of 19 business" issue. That is, the regulations affect the services provided beyond just the 20 assertion that increased costs indirectly trickle down to prices, routes and services.

21 The key ... is that to allow California to insist exactly when 22 and for exactly how long carriers provide breaks for their 23 employees would allow other States to do the same, and to 24 do so differently. "And to interpret the federal law to 25 permit these, and similar, state requirements could easily
lead to a patchwork of state service-determining laws,
rules, and regulations."

26 Id. at 1120 (quoting Rowe, 552 U.S. at 373). California's break laws therefore 27 impose "substantive restrictions upon the breaks taken by motor carrier drivers and 28 drivers' helpers, which binds the motor carriers to a set of routes, services,

1 schedules, origins, and destinations that it otherwise would not be bound to—2 thereby interfering with the competitive market forces in the industry.” Id. at 1122.
 3 It is exactly this type of interference that “Congress sought to avoid with the 4 preemption clause that specifically prohibits state regulation related to prices, routes 5 and services.” Id.

6 Courts using the Dilts analysis have consistently held that the FAAAA, as a 7 matter of law, preempts California’s meal and rest break laws as applied to motor 8 carriers because of the direct effects these laws necessarily have on a motor carrier’s 9 routes and services. See infra, Section I.

10 Likewise, a district court using the same preemption analysis in the context of 11 airline regulation recently granted a motion to dismiss, holding that California’s 12 meal and rest break laws are preempted as a matter of law as to airline ramp agents 13 under the Airline Deregulation Act (“ADA”). See Angeles v. US Airways, Inc., 14 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22423, *25-30 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 19, 2013). In Angeles, the 15 airline argued that ramp agents’ duties, including cleaning, fueling, and ramp-related 16 services to airplanes that service passengers, “directly impact[] airline schedules and 17 the point-to-point transportation of passengers and cargo, and therefore are 18 ‘services’ under the Airline Deregulation Act.” Id. at *28. The district court held 19 that a ramp agent’s “responsibility directly impacts the transportation of passengers 20 and cargo, and therefore to enforce state meal period and rest break regulations 21 would impermissibly regulate an air carrier’s service.” Id. at *29; see also 22 Blackwell v. Skywest Airlines, Inc., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 97955, *42-54 (summary 23 judgment holding that the ADA preempts California’s break laws as to airline 24 customer service representatives). Indeed, after Rowe, a number of courts outside of 25 California have held that the ADA preempts various wage and hour laws. See, e.g., 26 Difiore v. American Airlines, Inc., 646 F. 3d 81, 88 (1st Cir. 2011), cert. denied, 132 27 S. Ct. 761 (2001) (wage claim under “tips law” was preempted by the ADA because 28 “the tips law as applied here directly regulates how an airline service is performed . .

1 . not merely how the airline behaves as an employer” (emphasis added)); Air
 2 Transport Ass’n of Am., Inc. v. Cuomo, 520 F.3d 218 (2d Cir. 2008) (passenger “bill 3 of rights” law Airline Deregulation Act-preempted).

4 The significance of Dilts, and the cases following Dilts, is the recognition that 5 for the FAAAA to be effective, preemption determinations must not be made on a 6 carrier-by-carrier basis, but must instead be made industry-wide. Dilts, 819 F. Supp.
 7 2d at 1119-20. Thus, the same analysis that led to preemption of California’s meal 8 and rest periods as to Penske (Dilts), Vitran (Campbell), and many other carriers 9 that have been parties to suits in which the courts considered this issue dictates the 10 same result as to Abilene. Certainly, the same law cannot be preempted as to only 11 some motor carriers operating in California and not as to others.

12 D. As a Motor Carrier, the Rowe and Dilts FAAAA Preemption
 13 Analysis Applies Equally to Abilene.

14 The Dilts FAAAA preemption analysis applies equally to Abilene because the 15 facts of the Dilts case are indistinguishable in any relevant way from the facts of the 16 present action against Abilene. In Dilts, the plaintiffs represented a class of delivery 17 drivers and installers who would pick up Whirlpool appliances from the warehouse 18 and deliver them to a regional distribution center or to the customer for installation 19 by the driver and the installer. Dilts, 819 F. Supp. 2d at 1109. Similarly, here, 20 Plaintiff seeks to represent a class of drivers who transport freight from and to 21 various locations within California. See RJN, Exh. 1, Compl. ¶¶ 6, 14. Because, as 22 discussed above, California’s break laws dictate when motor carrier services may (or 23 may not) be provided, which routes motor carriers must travel upon (or when they 24 must leave their route to take a break), and how motor carrier prices are to be 25 determined, this Court should follow the Dilts holding that California’s meal and 26 rest break laws are preempted by the FAAAA.

4839-8201-5512.1

1 V. CONCLUSION

2 California's meal and rest break laws are preempted by the FAAAA because 3 the break laws have a "significant effect" on the services, routes, and prices of motor 4 carriers. As such, Plaintiff's third and fourth causes of action, including all relevant 5 "counts" premised on violations of California's meal and rest break laws, should be 6 dismissed with prejudice.
